

to whom it may concern,

The forests that are remaining on earth are vital in the maintaining of our fragile climate. We all know that if the climate destabilises, life for all species, including humans, is placed under threat.

So if we value our lives and the lives of our children, grand children and their grand children then we must do what we can to protect and preserve what is left of our delicate eco system.

So I ask on behalf of all people who care for ^{our} future generation not to log the Corunna Lake forest.

Kind regards,

Katherine Lynzaat-Reid
